

Thomas J. Laub

Assistant Professor of History

- Ph.D., University of Virginia, Modern European History.
- M.A., American University, European History.
- B.A., St. Lawrence University, History & Government.

Office: 213 Jobe Hall

Phone: (662) 846-4173

E-mail: tlaub@deltastate.edu

Undergraduate courses taught: World History I & II, Nineteenth Century Europe, Twentieth Century Europe, Twentieth Century World, Modern Germany, Nazi Germany, France from the Guillotine through de Gaulle, The French Revolution, Modern Japan, and The Second World War.

Graduate courses taught: Modern Europe, Modern Japan, The Second World War, Modern Germany, Nazi Germany, the Holocaust.

Research: At present, my research has two focal points. I continue to be interested in and research the German occupation of France during the Second World War. My first book studied the German army in France, and subsequent research concentrates on the German naval forces stationed in and around Bordeaux.

My second research project studies the laws of war in the latter half of the Twentieth Century.

Service: Phi Alpha Theta advisor, Writing across the Curriculum Committee Member