

DSU STUDENT TALK & MOBILIZATION MEETING

In the wake of George Floyd's death, DSU students along with countless individuals around the nation and world are eager to organize to improve social justice outcomes for African Americans and people of color in this nation. Winning the Race will sponsor this important conversation between student groups at DSU to identify spaces and opportunities for positive change when it comes to racial equity and social justice. This is a conversation for student organizations and student leaders at DSU. Participants should come prepared to present and discuss the following as it relates to ways their organization can promote equity and act as social justice advocates for Black Americans on campus and/or in the community. All members of your organization are encouraged to participate. At least one representative from your organization should be prepared to discuss the following:

1. What can your organization commit to doing in the 2020-2021 school year to promote racial equity and social justice on campus and/or in the community?
2. Propose at least one idea for a collaborative project with other student organizations to accomplish together on campus and/or in the community in 2020-2021 that advances racial equity and social justice.

IF YOU'RE NOT SURE WHAT YOU OR YOUR ORGANIZATION CAN DO, PLEASE: still call in, listen, and take advantage of opportunities to work collaboratively with your peers until you're able to identify something your organization can commit to and support.

These collaborative, student-led projects will receive support from Winning the Race (WTR), The Quality Enhancement Plan (QEP), and the Diversity Committee. This meeting won't solve all the problems in the world or on campus, but it is a great place to start! We hope you can join us!
