Poster Preparation Instructions

General Considerations

The display should include a statement of the problem, objectives of the project or research, the methodology used to solve the problem or implement the program, the major findings or outcomes and their significance, and conclusions. There should be logical research sequence: i.e., introduction (research questions/hypotheses), development (data collection/analysis), and conclusion. The conclusion(s), perhaps the most important part of the research, should be related to the project findings. Layout of the elements from top-left to bottom-right and/or sequential labeling will greatly aid the visitor.

Posters will be displayed throughout the day on March 26th – 27th, 2018. Judging, however, will take place from 11am – 12pm on March 26th. Display mounting must be completed by 8am on March 26th. All presenters must be present during the judging session to present and summarize their posters to the judges. After judging, posters will be displayed throughout the remainder of the conference and should be removed by the end of the day on March 27th. Remaining posters will be discarded after 2:00pm on March 27th.

Arrangement of Materials

Presentation may be presented on a tri-fold poster board. All poster materials must fit on the board. Tables will be provided. Authors presenting a laminated research poster board must supply their own easel for presentation. Velcro strips, thumbtacks, or other adhesive material will not be available for poster mountings.

Presenters may place the following materials on a large poster board: Photographs, diagrams, charts, data and narrative text. The title heading should be at least 1-1/2” high. It should include the title of the poster session and all authors’ names and institutional affiliations. Visual elements are encouraged. Remember to keep it simple. Present only enough information to support your conclusions. The amount of information presented on the poster should be concise and well organized. Posters that appear crowded with too much data should be avoided. To minimize crowding, consider giving interested individuals a copy of the research project abstract.

Helpful Suggestions

Text forms: Use short expanses of text mixed with data in tables, graphs, lists or illustrations. Reader should be able to focus on the main points immediately.

Type: Large, dark, block style. Don't use all capital letters; it is much harder to read. Lettering should be simple, bold, and easily legible from a distance of 3 feet. Directional arrows can help the viewer in following the sequence.

Color: Black or dark on white or light paper. Color combinations should be carefully considered for readability.

Matting: Attractive but subdued enough not to call attention away from text. Limit number of colors used. Use color with a purpose (to bring out a point or to code one portion of the text as distinct from another).

Overall Design: an effective display, aside from content, are those that are attractive, well organized, and largely self-explanatory.

Presentation Guidelines

1. A student should present the poster.
2. The presenter should prepare an outline or abstract of the major points of the poster.
3. The poster should not be read verbatim from the text. Not only are such presentations usually dull, but because of time constraints the author may be cut off by the session chair before reaching the most significant aspects of the presentation.
4. Oral presentations should represent, on average, a 5-10 minute summary of the poster. Highlights may be given regarding the purpose of the study, description of the sample, methodology, problems, and major findings, conclusions, or recommendations. The amount of time devoted to each highlight will vary according to the author's evaluation of the importance of each area to the paper.
5. During the judging session, all presenters must be available at the display to provide a formal, oral presentation (see item #3) of the project to the judges and to answer questions and discuss the contents.
6. Presenters are advised to prepare a single handout (25 copies recommended) summarizing the major components of the project. Presenters may wish to have a sign-up sheet to record names and addresses of attendees who would like further information, additional copies, etc.
