Discussion:
Fall Preparation	The fall semester is still scheduled to meet with a blend of online and hybrid courses. Cabinet is currently working on an action plan to provide to faculty, staff and students. Provost McAdams did request Academic Council’s perspective on students having total discretion to attend classes fully online this fall or requiring students to provide a medical reason from a physician. A straw poll indicated support for giving students full discretion on a vote of 6-Y; 2-N; 1-Abstain.

	States Cares funds are being used to purchase computers for labs as well as for loaner check-outs on an as-needed basis. The Provost emphasized the importance of faculty providing students with simple instructions about what to expect the first day of class and what their meeting schedules would look like as the semester progresses. Faculty need to be thinking about this now so that the information is available in Canvas by the first day of class, if not before.
Beyond Fall	Provost McAdams provided documents titled “Five Trends Higher Education Leaders Face” and “Preparing for a Challenging Winter” to Academic Council. These documents contain interesting findings that education leaders may find helpful as the fall semester approaches. The second document makes it clear the number of COVID-19 cases will greatly increase next Winter and the impact on higher education and society will continue for another 18 – 24 months.
